OPPOSE SHAH'S VISIT TO U.S. (July 24-27)

The Shah of Iran is planning a state visit to the United States. But this trip is not simply an exercise in diplomacy, it is a step towards creating another Vietnam in the Middle - East. The Shah is invited to visit because Iran is crucial to U.S. control in the Middle - East, and he is coming because he can not survive without U.S. support.

The Middle East contains approximately 2/3 of the world's oil resources. Most of this oil is located in the Persian Gulf region. This region contains the arteries, the life blood of the U.S. and other big powers who depend on oil to fill energy needs and to bring in money for their yearly balance of payments.

The United States imports about three million barrels of oil per day from the countries in the Persian Gulf. In ten years, U.S. daily consumption will be twelve million barrels per day. To meet this need, both Iran and Saudi Arabia will have to more than double their current oil output. At the same time, this growing industrial and economic dependence on the oil of the region turns the Persian Gulf into an "Achilles heel" for the United States.

This U.S. soft spot becomes increasingly more vulnerable due to the growing struggle for national liberation in Dhofar (on the Southern coast of the Arabian Peninsula) and the danger presented by the successful revolution in the Peoples Democratic Republic of Yemen, (Southern Yemen). As Richard Nixon has stated: "This area...combines intense local conflict with great power involvement. The combination is all the more dangerous because the outside powers' interests are greater than their control." According to Nixon's analysis, the hold the U.S. maintains on the area must be strengthened. But, in keeping with the Nixon Doctrine's "low profile" policy, this control must come from U.S. "partners" like the Shah of Iran.

The program to prepare Iran as the policeman of U.S. imperialism in the Persian Gulf and, in the near future, the Indian Ocean, includes unprecedented militarization. Furthermore, the Nixon administration plans to increase Iran's economic dependence upon the U.S. to insure long-term U.S. control in the area.

To enable Iran to fulfill its new role, the United States is prepared to supply the necessary equipment. In February 1973, the Pentagon announced the biggest arms deal in history-- a cash sale of $3 billion in arms to the Shah. The most sophisticated weapons in the U.S. arsenal were included in the deal; such as laser bombs (the light-directed bombs used against the Vietnamese people), helicopter gunships, and F-5E supersonic interceptors. Not to mention 300 more military "advisors" added to the thousands already sent there.

Politically, the Shah and the U.S. government have begun a campaign to give credibility to the Shah's role in the Gulf and publicize U.S. support for the Shah's "benevolent" rule. The recent exchange of ambassadors focused political attention on Iran, symbolizing its importance to the U.S. Nixon chose Richard Helms, the former head of the CIA, to be the new ambassador to Iran. The new Iranian ambassador to the U.S. is Zohedi, whose father was instrumental in the 1953 CIA coup d'etat in Iran. This coup brought back the dictatorial regime of the Shah.

Four months ago, the Shah celebrated the 10th anniversary of the "White Revolution."

Contrary to the propoganda of the regime, this "revolution" has been a total failure. Although Iran is an extremely wealthy country, the living conditions of workers and peasants have not changed. In 1971 starvation was widespread in many of the provinces. The situation became so extreme that in the oil rich Persian Gulf people were forced to sell their daughters to obtain food.

One third of Iranian children die before reaching five years of age. And average life expectancy is thirty-eight years. This is not surprising since there is only one doctor for every 3,233 people.

Most families consist of 5 to 10 household members. Over 40% of this population live in one single room. Most of the houses are made of mud, with only a few having electricity or running water. Food also is at a premium-- during a month each Iranian consumes an average of only 2.7 pounds of meat.

To the immense displeasure of the Shah's regime, the Iranian people are not keeping silent. In an attempt to better the terrible living conditions, opposition to the regime has increased in all segments of the population.

The discontent and opposition reached a high point two months ago in nationwide student demonstrations.

A total of 28 students were shot to death by the Shah's paratroopers on university campuses throughout Iran. Sixteen of these students were gunned down at the University of Tabriz, while participating in a militant strike. Strikes spread throughout the universities and high school campuses in protest of the massacre.

Mass support for the students was shown in various segments of the population. The entire commercial district of Tabriz shut down for three days in protest of the massacre of the sixteen students.

The Iranian government's brutal attack has been accompanied by a total news blackout, extending to the U.S. media. And the repression has extended outside Iran as well. Attacks have focused on the World Confederation of Iranian Students. Recently five members and supporters of the Iranian Students Association were arrested in San Francisco on phony charges of "assaulting a foreign diplomat." Their only "crime" is their desire to inform the American people of the true nature of the regime in Iran. They refute the Shah's public relations campaign and expose him for the dictator he really is.

We, the Iranian Students Association in the U.S. ask the American people to join us in demonstrations against the Shah's visit and to protest the backing by the U.S. government of the Shah's dictatorial regime. These demonstrations will be held in Washington D.C. Chicago and San Francisco.

- END THE U.S. ARMS BUILD UP IN IRAN
- DROP ALL THE PHONY CHARGES AGAINST THE I.S.A. FIVE
- STOP ALL SUPPORT OF THE SHAH'S REGIME
- DOWN WITH ALL U.S. PUPPETS IN THE MIDDLE EAST
